THEATRICAL GOSSIP.

Variety and the Alien—Shaw Sees the Joke—Death of Agnes Hewett—Liverpool and Bogus Managers—A Chevalier Sale.

Variety and the Alien.

At a specially convened meeting of the Variety Artists' Federation Executive Committee held yesterday (Tuesday), Messrs. Albert Joyce and Monte Bayly presented their report of variety conditions in Berlin and other important towns in Germany, and as a result it was unanimously resolved to call a special general meeting of the Federation for Friday, March 28 next, to consider the question as to whether or no the V.A.F. bar against certain Continental artists should be raised. The time and place of the said special general meeting will be announced in due course.

New Play for the Queen's Theatre.

Last weeks of "The Little Minister" at the Queen's Theatre are announced. Its place will be taken towards the end of March by a new romantic play entitled "Conchita," by Edward Knobloch, in which Miss Tallulah Bankhead will play the leading part.

Moss' Empires Recovery.

For last year Moss Empires, Ltd., are able to report a net profit of £34,137, which compares with a net loss for 1922 of £9,068 after £27,751 had been allocated to depreciation. This permits of a dividend of 2½ per cent. being recommended on the Ordinary shares, against nil a year ago, while after writing £4,276 (against £3,483) off expenditure on properties there is a balance of £18,904 to be carried forward, against £18,197 a year ago.

The Co-Optimists.

Mr. Archibald De Bear states that he has definitely resigned his chairmanship of the Co-Optimists Entertainment Syndicate, which represents the executive side of the Co-Optimists at the Prince of Wales Theatre, and his other activities associated with that enterprise. Mr. De Bear was one of the founders and part-author of the original show, and the title was his own invention, and he states that the copyright in it is still his own. Mr. De Bear adds that differences of opinion on questions of policy have arisen between the management and the artists. Matters were brought to a crisis this week by the refusal on the part of the artists to conform to the wishes of the management. "I am resigning," he went on, "because I feel the state of my health does not permit me to cope with the situation. I am going away for a holiday, and on returning I am going into management on my own account. I contemplate the formation of a reconstructed company of Co-Optimists to be run on the same lines as the present concern."

Next Year's Pantomime.

Already Moss Empires announce next year's pantomime—"Mother Goose."

Actors' Club.

The dance given by the Actors' Club on Saturday is to be followed by a Leap Year dance on Friday, Feb. 29, from 10 to 3 a.m., fancy or evening dress, music by the Varsity Band, and tickets, to be obtained from the Entertainments Committee, 2s. 6d. for members and 3s. 6d. for guests. The club will be open all night, and all sorts of novelties will be distributed. On this occasion the ladies will ask the gentlemen to dance. There will be a whist drive on March 9.

Drama League Discovery.

Mr. Wilfred Fletcher is making his first venture in management by producing Bertha N. Graham's play, "Rich Martha," at the Pier Theatre, Eastbourne, on March 10. A fine company has been engaged, headed by Miss Nan Marriott-Watson and Philip Anthony; others appearing are Miss Edith Saville, Mr. Harold Greaves, Mr. Cyril Twyford, Mr. Henry Hoare, Miss Florence Harwood, Miss Adah Dick, Mr. J. E. Stevenson, Mr. William Albert has undertaken the business management. "Rich Martha" is a find of the British Drama League, and was given in Dec., 1921, by the Sheffield Playgoers Society.

Greater London.

"Tons of Money" is the current attraction at the Borough Theatre, Stratford.

Robert Courtneidge brings "The Little Duchess" to the King's Theatre, Hammersmith, this week.

Mrs. Patrick Campbell submits her repertoire at the Wimbledon Theatre this week.

Arthur Gibbons and Dennis Eadie present "At Mrs. Beam's," at Brixton.

Football Match.

Fred Karno's "Football Match" is meeting with much approbation at the Wood Green Empire this week. Sandy Powell as Stuffy, the goal-keeper, is at his best, and in trying to keep the opposing leather-kickers at a respectful distance from his citadel reaches to the heights of furious fun. Billy Poluski as Ratty the Forward, Leslie Crowther and Leonard Battle all contribute to the success. A special feature is the singing of Vincent Ayden and Jean Allistone. The latter's songs include "Football," "Sporting Gals," "In the Eyes of the World," and "All Through Mr. Cupid Every Time," while Vincent Ayden contributes "Garden of Happiness" and "Two Eyes of Blue." Jean Allistone and Sandy Powell achieve quite a triumph with duet, "I Was a Fool."

Mr. Bernard Shaw at the Court.

If "Back to Methuselah" did not constitute five nights of unalloyed enjoyment to the majority of the audience at the Court Theatre last week, there was one person in the audience who appeared to enjoy every minute of it. That was Mr. Shaw. He was seated all the week in the box on the right of the stage, and he laughed heartily at even the poorest of the jokes. There is apparently truth in the rumour that nobody appreciates Mr. Shaw's plays more than the author himself.

Whatever is the verdict about the merits of "Back to Methuselah," there is no doubt about its financial success. "House Full" boards were exhibited all last week, and the remaining cycles, we are informed, are heavily booked.

Forbes-Robertson's Lecture.

Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson will lecture on "An Actor's View of Shakespeare" at the Wigmore Hall on Sunday evening, in aid of the People's Concert Society.

Late Albert Chevalier.

Having sold the long-time residence of the late Albert Chevalier, The Lake House, Woodberry Down (in conjunction with Messrs. Looking and Walker, of Stoke Newington), Messrs. Frederick Warman are selling part of the furniture and effects of the deceased actor on the 28th inst. For convenience of sale the effects have been removed to 105, Lordship-road, Stoke Newington.

New Actor Manager.

Dennis Trent, who has done much good work in the West End, supporting such stars as Miss Gladys Cooper, Miss Sybil Thorne, Sir Frank Benson, and Mr. Matson Lang, and is now the jeune premier in "Love in a Mist," is the latest recruit to the ranks of actor-managers. In association with a much older and well-known London impresario, Mr. Trent will produce a play of American extraction entitled "Droitwood." Its story ranges from a living-room in Steyne, taking in a drawing-room in Kensington and the Kensington Police Court.

Dramatist Dead.

Dr. H. Hoyle White, who had won a considerable reputation in amateur theatricals, both as player and playwright, died in London on Friday following an operation. He was formerly in practice at Erdington, Birmingham, and at the time of his death held a medical appointment under the Ministry of Pensions. One of his plays, "Fidelitas," was recently published.

Belle of New York.

By arrangement with Mr. J. Bannister Howard, the Salford Amateurs successfully gave seven performances at the Regent Theatre, Salford, and the Preston Amateurs a performance at the Empire, Preston, of "The Belle of New York."

Tipperary.

Mr. Henry James Williams, a crippled composer largely responsible for "It's a Long Way to Tipperary," is dead. Nobody would look at the song. Then, Mr. Bert Feldman supposes he sold a million—about four times the average of popular songs.

"Everyman," in King's College, Cambridge.

Miss Lilian Baylis has accepted for the Old Vic. Shakespeare Company the invitation of the Provost and Fellows of King's College, Cambridge, to perform the morality play, "Everyman," in King's College Chapel on March 15. Queen Elizabeth witnessed the last dramatic performances in this chapel.

"Three Birds."

"Three Birds" begins a tour at the Opera House, Harrogate, and subsequently will visit the following towns:—

Buxton, Oldham, Nottingham, Lincoln, Middlebrough, Peterborough, Norwich, Sheffield, Grimsby, Folkestone, Hastings, Bournemouth, Southampton, Portsmouth, Eastbourne, Brighton, Bognor, Liverpool, Warrington, Huddersfield.

The company is travelling the original Criterion scenery and production, and H. F. Maltby will play his original part of Sir Thomas Parsons. The other members of the company include:—

Mr. Edward Swinton, Mr. Douglas Hutchison, Mr. James Dwyer, Miss Gillian Lind, Miss Cecily Graeme, and Billie Joyce.

Mr. Emile Littler will be the business manager and Mr. Arthur Law Raynor the Press representative in advance.

"Step Lively."

The comedy revue, "Step Lively," by Bert Bray, was produced at the Regent Theatre, Loughton, last week. Dave Morris works with unflinching energy and appears in many humorous situations. In a burlesque strike scene his address is quaint and original. Jack Hayes and Jill Jays appear in several popular musical numbers. Mr. Jack Hayes' jokes create much amusement. Mr. Bert Bray appears as Dora Dreadnought and scores heavily. The finale of Scene II, "Veterans of Variety," wins much applause. Billy Vernon as Harry Mustard ably assists in comedy scenes throughout the show, and the dancing of the Four Jesters adds to the success. Lifting music has been supplied by Mr. Jack Watson, and a successful tour should be assured.

Death of Agnes Hewett.

We regret to announce the death of Miss Agnes Hewett. She was a famous Gaiety girl, and afterwards played many parts. A pleasant, lovable woman in private life, the wife of Mr. Frank Boyd, the well-known journalist.

"Reprisals."

A play entitled "Reprisals" will be done by the Sunday Players, at the Garrick Theatre, on Sunday.

Liverpool and Bogus Managers.

Following on the theatrical mass meeting held in Liverpool last Sunday, the Carters' Union of that city have decided to co-operate with the Theatrical Employers' Association by refusing in future to cart any luggage or scenery of any company whose bonafides are not vouched for by the Actors' Association. It may be said that so far as Liverpool theatres and music halls are concerned, there may never be any occasion to carry out the threat.

Scarborough in Fancy Dress.

Scarborough Entertainment Managers' Association held their second annual fancy dress ball at Olympia, Scarborough, on Thursday. There were thirty-six handsome prizes for the best fancy dresses. The judges were Mr. Fred Reynolds, the Sheffield Agent; Mr. Oswald Cray, Opera House, Scarborough, and Grand Theatre, Derby; and Mr. Will Catlin, Futurist Theatre, Scarborough. The ballroom was very handsomely decorated under the direction of Mr. Matt Glenville, of the Theatre Royal, Scarborough.

Sunderland Palace.

Shortly the Palace Theatre, Sunderland, will be closed for alterations. It will be re-seated and thoroughly overhauled by its new proprietor, Mr. George Black, who is already interested in many similar enterprises in the North, as well as being the proprietor of the Whitehall Rink and the Stadium, at Sunderland. The Palace was opened many years ago by the Liverpool Brothers.

Ellen Terry celebrates one more birthday on Wednesday.

Bannister Howard's company is ringing the eternal changes on "The Belle of New York" at the Grand Theatre, Croydon.

The Royal Operatic Trio, comprising Lewis Roberts (piano), Parry Jones (tenor), and William Aspdren (baritone), proceed to Paris on Wednesday to fulfil two concert engagements.

William Archer's "Green Goddess" registers her 200th performance at the St. James's Theatre. This nearly coincides with the 2,000th performance of the Rajah by Mr. George Arliss.

Frank Forbes-Robertson has just added "Sweet Lavender" to his repertoire. Mr. Forbes-Robertson has acquired the rights of a new romantic play of the revolutionary order.

Hamilton Harty, conductor of the Hallé Orchestra, lecturing at Manchester, described Scriabin as the most vicious and sensual of modern composers, and Stravinsky as the most brutal.

Frank Wheeler, once a Gaiety comedian, and founder of the Wheeler-Edwards Co. in South Africa, has gone to Devos Platz to visit his only daughter (Mrs. T. Elder Hearn), who is very ill.

Godfrey Tearle is wise in sweeping away his first failure. When he produces a new play in supersession of "The Fairy Tale" at the Ad-phi, Miss Muriel Alexander will be his leading lady.

Gyles Isham, who so impressively played Hamlet with the O.U.D.S., is to be seen as Romeo in London the second week in April in a production which the Dramatic Players' Society is giving at the Royal Academy of Art Theatre.

Jean Bedini, who produced "Chuckles" at the Oxford two summers ago, "You'd Be Surprised" at Covent Garden, and later, "Scandals," for T. Elder Hearn, has received a franchise to operate on the Columbia circuit next season.

Madeleine Lucette Ryley has written a comedy-opera, the score of which, by a British composer, is rapidly nearing completion. The title chosen is "Love Lane," and is based on the very successful comedy "Mice and Men," by the same author.

Nelson Keys sailed for New York on the Olympic. Cable negotiations started by Mr. Charles Dillingham resulted in the signing of a contract late during the same afternoon, wherein Mr. Keys agreed to sail immediately to appear with the Ziegfeld Follies.

A LOUIS PARKER PLAY.

First Production by Birmingham Amateurs.

It falls to the lot of too few amateur theatrical companies to provide the public with a first performance of a play by an established dramatist. Such an honour, however, is afforded this week to the Erdington Players, whose fortunes have been directed for almost a quarter of a century by Mr. and Mrs. W. Jackson Houlston. Mr. Louis N. Parker's romantic comedy-drama, "The Right Hand of the Prince," was to have seen George Alexander in the title-role but for his untimely death. That the present producer has been entrusted to take his place is a recognition by the author of his long and valuable services to amateur histrionics.

Mr. Parker, who intends seeing the performance on Friday, has, of course, little to learn in the way of historical costume plays, in view of his acknowledged leadership in pageantry, and his present work, woven round a sixteenth century Venetian story, undoubtedly has the right atmosphere. Its dialogue has a crisp, robust, pointed flavour, enriched with not a few epigrammatic lines, while the plea of the captive Prince of Zara, which forms the denouement, might well have been taken from the literary jewellery of the "Merchant of Venice." The story is well developed and full of incident. Incidentally, it may be mentioned that the Jackson Houlston Company has raised not less than £10,000 for charitable and social objects during its honourable career. The producer is not one to limit his offerings to net receipts; the gross takings go to the object announced, and the cost of costumes, scenery, and so on is borne by himself and his colleagues. Happily, he has three artistic and practical helpers in Messrs. Wilfrid Brage, J. E. Machin, and Alfred Maurice, who provide scenery, and certainly this trio accomplished some pleasing and serviceable effects which had no blemish of obtrusiveness.

Over 50 performers took the stage, and 35 of them had speaking parts. There are five acts, the first representing the castle of Zara across the sea. The elderly Princess Zara and her retainers are in feud with Venice and become pirates. Miss Dorothy Dukes as this "she-wolf" gives a strong portrait of a somewhat sinister figure, who at the same time is a proud and tender mother of the hero; she possesses excellent elocutionary powers and considerable technique. As Basil (her son) Mr. Jackson Houlston is a towering figure both in stature and dramatic instinct. He knows how to occupy the stage, and whether it be in comedy or in a tender atmosphere, he is equally at home. It is while he is suffering from depression and inertia that the beautiful and wilful Giovanna, daughter of the noble Venetian house of Foscarelli, is wrecked, captured, and brought to the castle. She spurns this "white-livered wretch," as she scornfully terms him. Yet her dignity and beauty have created the one thing needful to make a man of him. How he devises her escape, first disguised as an old man, and then as himself (the Prince of Zara); how he is rescued from drowning by a fisherman with an unquenchable sense of comedy; and finally how he penetrates into the Foscarelli household at a masked ball, and rides Giovanna of an undesirable bridegroom to become one himself; all this is admirably told and admirably acted. And in the condemnation scene—wherein he is either to suffer death as an enemy or have his right hand cut off as a spy or felon, but is saved because Giovanna and he share a double ring which a friendly travelling priest had blessed the same morn—Mr. Jackson Houlston is a real pleasure to listen to.

As the imperious but yearning Giovanna Mrs. Jackson Houlston displayed a wide range of emotion; the expression she gave to the heroine's uncertain fears of the identity of her St. George (so the Prince was christened in her land of dreams) during his secretly arranged interview at the palace was quite convincing. She also indicated a nice appreciation of the lighter and more satirical side of the drama in the opening scene of the mask. Here she learns that the Prince of Regussa (Antonio Morosini, a sullen suitor, played by Mr. Alfred E. Milner), whom her father favours, is a philanderer, which, of course, predisposes her towards "St. George"—her rescuer. On Saturday, it should be mentioned, Miss Kathleen Walker, who had understudied the part on account of Mrs. Houlston's illness, appeared with no little success at the dress rehearsal.

Among the remaining chief parts, one should refer to the free and easy acting of Mr. Frank Sanders as the old fisherman, who employs the rescued Prince; to his lovelorn daughter, whose assumption of courtship was capably done by Miss Peggy Hughes; to the jealous but true-hearted Zanetto, whom Mr. Douglas Davidson ably represented; to Pietro Foscarelli, whom Mr. Vince Shirley made an elderly and worldly and garrulous father; and to the monk of Mr. Charles E. Ingall, who had a difficult part to play, and had evidently studied it carefully. Of course, one would hardly expect professional efficiency and technique in these and the minor parts, but Mr. Kenneth Francombe quite looked his rôle of housemaster, while Messrs. Fred Parsons and Eric Britton as two quarrelsome friends were prominent among the ensemble.

"BACHELOR HUSBANDS."

With Naughty New York Wives.

New Comedy, by Avory Hopwood, Produced at the Devonshire Park Theatre, Eastbourne, on Feb. 26.

Cast:—
Tom Morgan, Farren Soutar; Sam Hargrave, James Duncan; Artie Lorimer, Jack Heller; Billy Reynolds, John Williams; Barker (a butler), Dougie Gardiner; Grandama Sutton, Daisy England; Nina Hargrave, Toni Bruce; Betty Lorimer, Gladys Mason; Sybil Sutton, Stella Bonheur; Doris Kitcham, Ivy Langley; Mary (Fifi's Personal Maid), Irene Barnett; Fifi Morgan, Betty Ross Clarke.
The latest American importation, "Bachelor Husbands," introducing a new leading lady in Miss Betty Ross Clarke, thoroughly amused the first night's audience at the Devonshire Park Theatre, Eastbourne. This farce-comedy, with a strong dramatic punch towards the end of the second act, is a queer mixture of witty lines, at times not in the best of taste, and clean sentimental comedy.

The story might be best described as a complete satire on the methods and general behaviour of modern American wives, and the moral, if any, suggests that it is merely asking for trouble when husbands on the other side of the Atlantic allow their womenfolk too much rope, away from their own domestic surroundings.

The first act shows us three lonely husbands, Tom Morgan (Farren Soutar), Sam Hargrave (James Duncan), and Artie Lorimer (Jack Heller), bewailing their lot. They have allowed their respective wives to travel at lib. together through Europe for months on end, while they sit at home to cable money, settle up bills, and certainly ask no disturbing questions upon the return of the fair globe trotters. However, the tables are soon turned. The wives become suspicious when they discover that their husbands' greetings are somewhat lukewarm upon their belated arrival back in New York, and they are quick to realise that it is not always a case of absence makes the heart grow fonder.

The second and third acts are devoted to the process of wife taming, and we see the husbands each in turn bringing their wives to a sense of stern reality. The husbands want children. This is the final ultimatum. The wives readily agree to the suggestion—and in anything but subtle dialogue they prepare to make up for lost time.

Perhaps a better title would have been "Babies Wanted."

Mr. Avory Hopwood believes in calling a spade a spade, such as—
"I might as well have taken on a female travelling salesman."

"It's nice to have a child if I don't want to go anywhere."

"If my wife had to have a child, it would have to be born at a house party."

"If man can't get love at home, he is bound to find physical and spiritual guidance elsewhere."

"Sarah, the pigeon, is the only woman in the house who has not spent a summer holiday in Europe, and look what she's got—twins!"

Mr. Cecil Barth, who presents "Bachelor Husbands," has been well served by an exceptionally strong cast of artists. Miss Betty Ross Clarke as Fifi Morgan strikes quite a new note in leading ladies, and it seems highly probable that she will make many friends on her arrival in London. Never blatant, she understands the full value of facial expression, and this fact alone helped her to skate over thin ice more than once during the course of the evening. Mr. Farren Soutar, as the humiliated and reproachful husband, gave a sincere and polished performance. Excellent work was given by Miss Toni Bruce, Miss Gladys Mason, and Miss Daisy England, while Mr. John Williams and Miss Stella Bonheur gave distinction to the rôles of a pair of moonstruck young lovers. The surprise and outstanding hit of the play was provided by Mr. Jack Heller, as husband number two, who appeared to have more regard for his ukulele than for the company of his long-absent wife. Here is a perfect character-study. Full of restraint, and always in the picture, round after round of applause greeted Mr. Heller's brilliant conception of what otherwise might have been a rather unsavoury rôle.

When Mr. Norman Page, who produced "Bachelor Husbands," speeds up the action considerably, it seems more than likely that this production will prove to be an excellent West End box-office attraction of the near future.

A very critical and half-frozen Eastbourne audience gave the play and players no less than twelve curtain calls, and Mr. Soutar promised that Mr. Barth would cable the verdict promptly to the author, who was "waiting in" somewhere in U.S.A.

GOETHE'S "FAUST"

At the Old Vic.

There have been a good many stage versions of the Faust legend, and none of them have fared so badly in England as Goethe's famous play. Both Irving's and Tree's productions never pretended to be faithful translations, and Gonnard's operatic version which preceded these had already supplanted Goethe's play in the minds of the English public. So Messrs. Tristan and Graham Rawson have gone back to the original, and the Old Vic. management, with its unflinching good taste, is producing a good deal of the play that Goethe wrote.

Mr. Robert Atkins has given an excellent production, thoughtful and intelligent, and near in spirit to the original. The Walpurgis-night scene is a fine, effective piece of stage-craft, and if the final scene is like a Christmas card, so is, apparently, the conception in Goethe's writing.

FALLEN STARS.

was told "which they are," and he voted for them. And now Mr. Collingwood Hughes said they had become "whole-timers." The change, he hoped, would be for the better. In the House of Lords, the Peers did stay and listen to the debates; they did not hide themselves in the smoke-room.

Fund's Admirable Work.

Business men made their fortunes easily, whilst professional men had to live from day to day. Their business was far more uncertain than was that of the man who when he left his office left others behind to carry on his work. As an outsider, so to speak, he had given great attention to the history of the stage, and he had found that some artists who had met with success at one time or another had not adequately made provision for their future, and had, as a result, fallen upon evil days. They had lived "golden lives" at the time when they could afford it, and in their turn had given assistance to those who were in distress.

Charity and Benevolence.

As he had said, he had studied, as far as an outsider could study, the record of the stage in relation to the unhappy artists who had met with failure, and he had found that the general feeling among artists lay in the direction of charity and benevolence, and that this spirit of charity and benevolence had extended to other deserving causes. It was that warm-heartedness on the part of those who belonged to the theatrical profession which had led him when anyone had cared to ask him for small services quickly to render them so as to help and encourage those who had fallen.

Even if the most distinguished of those present contemplated for a moment on the many tragedies that had occurred in their profession, he would think that it was only by the grace of God he had not become a tragedy himself. There must be many in their profession who owed their success to the casual meeting of an acquaintance—who had experienced the difference between success and failure by a chance happening.

Gratitude to Donors.

They should not, indeed, fail to express gratitude to those shining lights of the profession who had from time to time responded to the appeals for financial help, who had dignified the whole purpose and scope of the profession, and they should all especially bear in mind that with their donations to the Fund they would be helping to relieve their brothers and sisters in middle or old age who had fallen off by the wayside.

The Profession's Difficulties.

Mr. R. H. Gillespie, in responding, said last year, when he also had the pleasure of responding to the toast, he sounded a note of optimism. This year he was sorry to say that note was hardly justified. But when one considered the tremendous difficulties which their particular branch of the entertainment world had to put up with, he was sure they would all agree with him that what he said last year, although it had not been justified, was not their own fault. Managers were blamable, artists were blamable, the stage staff were blamable, but in his humble opinion the real blame lay outside themselves—namely, the Government and other authorities, who made it so difficult for them to carry on their business. He thought last year they were going to get out of a number of difficulties, and when one saw the offer made by the Chairman of the Music-halls Committee of the L.C.C. to help them, which was thrown down by the cranks who knew nothing about the subject in general council, it was absurd that he should stand up and apologise for the hopeless condition in which they were that night.

Possible and Impossible.

When it was possible to run a cabaret show and sell drinks in the auditorium, and present no one but "star" performers, pay no Entertainment Tax, and present the cabarets in buildings that were not properly equipped, while music-hall managements had to construct their buildings properly, and equip them properly, and yet were not allowed to sell drinks in the same way as the cabarets did, and they had also to pay the Entertainment Tax, he was sure they would all realise how difficult it was for managements to carry on. Then there was the embargo on the sale of chocolates, cigarettes, cigars and other such items. When he went to a cabaret, he could buy cigars, have whiskies and sodas, anything he liked to eat, in fact, at any time of the day and night. If on his own theatre and asked for a cigar after nine o'clock in the evening, he was told he could not have one. He could not even get a box of matches. But if he went to another of his theatres he could not buy chocolates, but could have whiskies and sodas until 10 p.m.

The trouble that faced them was the wretched Entertainment Tax. Last year his firm paid £193,000 in Entertainment Tax, and they had the greatest difficulty in making about £12,000 profit. They would appreciate how difficult it was for them.

Appeal to Artists.

Mr. Joe O'Gorman said that no one knew better than he that the life of the variety artist was on the average shorter than that in any other profession. He begged to make a small contribution on behalf of Mr. Joe Elvin and himself of 20 guineas to the Fund.

That Reminds Me Where I Left My Umbrella makes for much laughter. At the Birmingham Empire last week, George H. Elliott made one of the biggest hits in his meteoric career with the new musical entitled "Moonshine." Paul W. Brown has a waltz-ballad, "Wonderful One," now at the height of its success, has been greeted nightly with very loud applause at the cabaret concerts of the Casino Club. Annette Symon's rendition of "The Love Song" is continuing her popularity and is being desired. Harry and Barton Lester are continuing their success in the revue entitled "The Band-Up," with "Barney Google." The audiences at this week eminently to the tastes of the Birmingham Empire. "The Mellow Moon" has been added by the Kings featured in "Some Hustle" revue, and Wally Black, dating from the Palace,

They are especially suitable for baritones with banter as solos or a concerted party. Hazy Barratt and Tom Howell, who provide a fund of good numbers which are at once virile and amusing. Georges Pontana and Maudie Moss, who are dancing at the Hotel Metropole, are making a special feature of Nora Snowball's fine waltz, "L'Etoile d'Emoir" during their engagements, while Lex Holmes, both at Greenock and the Polytechnic, Glasgow, reports great success with the popular orchestra medley, "Melody Maze." Several large printings have been exhausted in the last few weeks alone.

That fine body of instrumentalists, the Tri-Cowley Band, appeared at the Empire, Edinburgh, on Monday last week, for their initial appearance there, and were accorded the reception that would remain a proud and pleasant memory to the members of the talented combination. Among their contributions to the programme were "Yes, Google," "The Raggle," "Yes, Ma?" "Come Right In!" "airs," both of which popular items have been in the echo. This week the band is continuing its tour at the Mosses, and is at the Empire, Glasgow, where an abnormal demand for orchestration has created the melody, "Barney Google."

A SLUMP IN STARS.

THE flow of oratory at the annual dinner of the Variety Artists' Benevolent Fund on Sunday was appreciably contributed to by a veteran of variety, and Mr. JOE O'GORMAN, who for so many years has been in the forefront of music-hall endeavour, touched the spot when, in appealing for the Fund—and in setting an example by the contribution of a substantial sum on behalf of himself and his old-time comrade, JOE ELVIN—

he stressed the fact that the life of a "star" was a short one. The average existence of a "star" has been placed at five years. In some cases it flashes forth like a meteor, and goes out again instantly; in others it lasts a half-score years, and there are examples of "stars" retaining their brilliance for a quarter of a century. In the old once-nightly days the programmes at the London halls contained a list of names, each of which could be relied upon individually to draw, and they were constantly recruited by new arrivals, whose talents were fostered and encouraged until they took their allotted place in the variety firmament. Nowadays the younger generation of artists is lost in the maze of revue, and the exercise of their gifts is restricted to subsidiary work, in which their individuality rarely has full play. The revue absorbs the "stars" of the profession; it rarely brings one into view.

There is a lamentable deficiency in "top-liners," and this is due to the fact that so little encouragement is given to the smaller acts. Where, it is asked, are the yearlings of yesterday? There is a distinct hiatus between the first-line favourites and the rank and file of vaudeville, and this is not likely to be eliminated by the policy adopted in certain quarters by which an artist no sooner shows signs of winning more approval than the featured act than he or she is diverted to an earlier place in the programme, thus being deprived of the opportunity of appearing under favourable conditions. By these means many a youthful artist is prevented from coming to maturity, and is lost for ever.

On this page last week two charming American artists echoed the suggestions we put forward recently with regard to performers and local managers co-operating in giving acts a proper staging. The incongruity displayed in the setting of songs, scenes, and sketches is almost incredible, and the SISTERS TRIX show a keen appreciation of the requirements of an artistic act in suggesting that the management should place at the disposal of performers whatever effects the latter require.

A great part of the success attained by our charming American visitors named is due to the skilful lighting and the way in which their act is "housed." They also favour the adoption of the American system, which provides that the artist shall state what his or her "props" are, and notify the precise requirements of the turn. That is done already to a certain extent in England, but it has to be made a condition of the contract that such particulars should be given, and if "bill matter" is not supplied two weeks in advance artists run the risk of having their engagements cancelled.

On the question of the health of variety, the Misses TRIX also grow eloquent. There should, they think, not be only one "star" on the bill, but several. But can such a number be found? How many tops of bills are there in existence? We doubt if there are sufficient to go round once, let alone in bunches. There are something over a hundred variety theatres proper in the kingdom, but we traverse the list of companies in vain to find half that number who could be relied upon to draw big houses. Then there is the question of salary. To suggest that five or six turns, each drawing something approaching £200, should be put into one bill is a proposition that is not economically sound. There is not enough money among variety patrons as a whole to make the enterprise profitable.

We would prefer to see the music hall become a family institution to which people would go week by week irrespective of any big names being on the bill, but secure in their conviction of seeing an enjoyable show. There are scores—nay, hundreds—of acts in the country who could supply entertainment of a wholesome character fit to entertain the masses and provide value for the money expended.

A variety programme is undoubtedly the cheapest commodity on the market, and if only the element of fairness could be imported into the treatment of amusements by the authorities, and the restrictions and impositions removed, the possibilities of carrying on at a profit would once again become real.

THE VALUE OF VERSATILITY.

By HILDA BAYLEY.

It seems to me that we all live in cycles—that is to say, if a thing happens once, it happens half a dozen times; and then—on to the next cycle. I remember how I loved my first big part, in "The Yellow Jacket"; but it was not till I had played Wang Ping in "Mr. Wu" and two or three sketches that I got a chance of trying my hand at—let me see, emotional heroines came next: Karen, in "The Impossible Woman," was typical of half a dozen, at least. Then I "cycled" into a succession of cats—the sort of "cat" who persecutes me so relentlessly in my present part! Only in that cycle I had to play the cats myself! Child wives, young mothers, "vamps"—I had fits of them all, from Desdemona to the siren in "Out to Win," and what struck me as so odd was that in each new cycle I came across, for the first time, as it seemed, people in real life who exactly corresponded with the people I was trying to represent on the stage. Even in real life things "went in cycles" where I was concerned. I got quite superstitious about it at last!

Yes, I'll confess that I am superstitious. Nothing brings me worse luck than spilling ink, for instance; and I confess that if I meet a London pigeon strutting in the roadway when I am setting out on an important piece of business I turn down the nearest side street rather than pass it! But then I feel I have a certain right to be superstitious, with a real ghost in the family! If anything bad is threatening me, or mine—something comes and knocks at my door the night before. But when I open it—nobody is there!

It's easy to laugh, of course, but I sometimes wonder if the Things of the Shadows (whatever they may be, and if they exist at all, as something stranger than mice in the waistcoat) are not peculiarly attracted to the interpreters of life—the singers, the musicians, the actors, all those people whose art implies a sending out of currents of emotion, invisible waves of feeling, wherewith to influence their fellows.

At any rate, I know when I was once at work on Lady Macbeth, I always had a queer feeling that I wanted to get into touch in the sleep-walking scene with the invisible I felt around. Oh, yes! I've played many Shakespeare parts—and every other kind, too: music-hall sketches, musical comedy, revue, comedy, farce, and melodrama. For I am sure that an artist should be in every sense versatile. Every new thing attempted teaches one something, and enlarges one's personal knowledge of the scope and possibilities of acting. Versatility keeps an artist alive; makes her not less but more fit to play the type of part for which she is peculiarly suited.

Film work teaches an actress a great deal. It teaches her repose, among other things. People sometimes think that film work is merely a matter of making faces—grimaces. They little know. In film work you have not to simulate feeling or emotion, you have actually to feel and think, just as you do on the stage. The camera photographs the mind. It is wrong to imagine that stage artists have to do more work than film artists; it is only a question of difference of method. In the film you need only face the camera and your thoughts and feelings—your acting—are photographed. But on the stage you have to reckon with two other factors—the spoken word (a medium the film denies you), and the audience—the audience that responds not to your photographed actions, but to your living, vibrating self! Surely that makes stage work, if anything, easier rather than more difficult! I don't know—stage or film, I love them both, and at the moment my whole interest is in the former, in the part (a return to my second "cycle") that I am now playing. But I shall always enjoy film acting as a change from the "legitimate." As we all know, a change is good for us. It assists us to make ourselves versatile, and versatility is the very essence of an artist's life.

THE DRAMA IN AMERICA.

"Beggar on Horseback"—"Hell-Bent For Heaven"—"The Wonderful Visit"—"Rust."

(FROM "THE ERA" SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.)

NEW YORK, February 16.—There is neither a beggar nor a horse in the play by George S. Kaufman and Marc Connelly, entitled "Beggar on Horseback," which Winthrop Ames has just produced at the Broadhurst Theatre; but there are things that are probably more entertaining. The play is based on a piece by Paul Appel and is in two parts. The point at which the authors seem to have aimed is the fatal effect of the methods of "big business" upon artistic production, and the suppression of genius by the glorification of the common-place. Neil MacRae, a young musical genius, who is composing a symphony, and is barely able to support himself by teaching, is in love with Cynthia Mason, a charming girl, but as poor as himself, and is pursued by Gladys Cady, a girl of the flapper type, whose father is a self-made millionaire. Neil's chum, Dr. Albert Rice, finding him run down from overwork, advises him to be practical and marry the rich girl. Then the doctor administers an opiate, under the influence of which Neil practically engages himself to Gladys by telephone.

He falls asleep, and most of what follows is his dream. Married to the brainless Gladys, he is carried off to his new home and introduced to an impossible family in the presence of innumerable flunkies, pets and freaks. He is warned that henceforth he must compose only comic songs and jazz, and is taken to a restaurant, where Gladys dances with the waiters. Then he is made a director in his father-in-law's company, and instructed with much capital fooling in the mysteries of efficiency and "big business" in an establishment where novelists and poets are kept in cages to turn out the stuff that is circulated by millions. Soon he finds himself behind bars, doomed to compose jingles on demand, and is so exasperated by the goings-on of his bride and her parents that he kills them all with a paper-knife.

Then comes a burlesque trial scene, in which his murdered relatives appear as judge, prosecuting counsel, and witnesses. He is found guilty, and condemned to play to his juniors, but obtains permission to show a pantomime that he has written, "A Kiss in Xanadu," a charmingly spectacular bit of serio-comic romance, in which the Prince of Xanadu steals from his bed and betakes himself to a park in the moonlight in search of romance. The Princess follows on a similar quest. Both are disguised and masked, and they meet and fall in love. Next morning, when they breakfast together, they are bored with each other's company, and their thoughts are all of the magic meeting the night before. At length, when he is about to be executed, the young musician awakes from his dream and wins the faithful Cynthia.

That this mixture of fantasy, spectacle, and satire was keenly enjoyed by the first-night audience was evident from the frequent end hearty laughter to be heard on all sides.

Roland Young, in the character of Neil MacRae, realises all the humorous possibilities of the rôle, and Kay Johnson plays Cynthia charmingly.

George W. Barber, Marion Ballou, Anne Carpenter, and Osgood Perkins impersonate the four members of the Cady family quite cleverly. George Mitchell and Grethe Rust-Nissen are excellent in the pantomime. Cleverly devised and well directed, the play has won unanimous praise and is booked for a long run.

"Hell-Bent For Heaven."

This three-act play by Hatcher Hughes has scored a success at the Frazee Theatre. The scene is laid in the home of David Hunt and his family.

THE PLAY IN PARIS.

Political Satire at Vieux Colombier—German Drama at the Maison de l'Œuvre—"L'Invitation au Voyage" at the Odeon.

(FROM "THE ERA" SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.)

PARIS, Sunday.—René Benjamin has given us one of the best ironical portraits of our times in his three-act comedy, "Il faut que chacun soit à sa place," which Jacques Copeau has produced at the Vieux Colombier. It paints the puppets of to-day in an amusing manner, with good-humoured satire. An ordinary tradesman, but a man of action, Bourdeducq, having made an immense fortune, buys a big estate, becomes lord of the manor, furnishes his mansion with modern art, and lives in extravagant style. He keeps a mistress, a lady likewise having a bad attack of "swelled head." She will not even visit prominent actresses as being beneath her. The only one who has not lost her balance is the profiteer's charming daughter. All the other characters appear corrupted. But the past transactions of Bourdeducq are being sifted, and he is threatened with prosecution. Immediately his "friends" are up in arms to protect him, but the ex-tradesman pacifies them by his assurance of immunity. He knows too many influential people implicated in the same deals for the authorities to dare to attack him. However, to the general surprise, he is arrested, but not for long. The examining magistrate orders his release next day, and a big fête is organised in the country mansion to celebrate Bourdeducq's return. Even the High Chief Justice is present at this function. Nevertheless, there are some honest people left in the world. A few of these meet, and plot to "put everyone in his proper place" (hence the title). They pretend a revolution has broken out on the capital, and name Bourdeducq chief of the police to organise reforms in the town (on the adage of putting a thief to catch a thief). The daughter marries a timid young journalist and all finishes satisfactorily. "Il faut que chacun soit à sa place" is played to perfection by André Bacque (as the modern man of action), Albert Savry (a shady lawyer), Jacques Copeau (contented to hold a minor rôle, this time in his own theatre), Suzanne Bing (as the profiteer's wife), Valentine Teissier (his mistress), and Line Nero (his sympathetic daughter).

Rip, the revue author, has tried his hand as a playwright, and his effort in the form of a three-act comedy, entitled "Le Tracassin," has been produced at the Potinière. The title rôle signifies a much-worried individual who is never contented with what he has. As soon as one woman is in his arms he wants another. The action passes on the Riviera, and the intrigues of the inconstant lover form the plot. Aimé Simon Girard cleverly impersonates the fickle fellow in question. Nevertheless, I prefer Rip's revues.

"Le Fer à l'Opera."

This is the title of Yvan Goll's French version of a German drama of the city of Barcelona. Jose is a song-writer who longs to break away from the atmosphere of rust. He becomes a bull-fighter for one afternoon, but is hissed from the arena when he discovers in the angry and frustrated bull a fellow-sufferer on the earthly junk-heap. Then he smashes a bottle over the head of Miguel, his rival for the hand of the beautiful Paula. "To kill a man," says Jose's old father, rejoicing, "is the only way to escape from the Ancantes." So Jose flees to Valencia, where he becomes the most popular singer, pianist, and song-writer in the whole city. In a few months Jose returns to Barcelona to find that Miguel is not only alive, but has married Paula, and his old father stabs Miguel before he can shoot Jose, thus removing the one obstacle to the song-writer's happiness. Clarke Silvernail and Selena Rovle head the cast of sixteen players.

"FRANCESCA DA RIMINI."

Miss Pax Robertson, on Sunday evening, presented the Italian poet's play, using Mr. Arthur Symonds' translation. It was announced, before the curtain rose, in a witty "introductory" by Miss C. A. Arfwedson, that although very long, the play would be given in its entirety. This version skilfully preserved the love tragedy of Paolo and Francesca, and also vividly depicted the martial spirit of those stirring times with the interecine struggles between the Da Polenta and Di Malatesta. The beauty and imagery of the love scenes were exquisitely shown by Miss Pax Robertson, while her radiance and martial bearing in the second act was a noteworthy piece of acting. As the dreamy lover Mr. Ivain March put in some fine work; the long speeches allotted Paolo were delivered with sincerity and feeling. The brotherly affection felt for Francesca by Ostasio was neatly depicted by Mr. James Kirkham. Mr. Bruce Moir was sufficiently malevolent as the one-eyed monster, Malatestino, the heavy part of Giovanni being played in melodramatic lines by Mr. Norman Macdonald. In a very long cast mention should be made of the capital Jester of Mr. Alex. Robbins, the spiritual beauty of Miss Katharine Stanley as Samaritana, and the character studies of Mr. Fordham Ellis (Ser Toldo) and Gilbert Hall, the much-travelled Merchant.

"The Wonderful Visit."

This five-act play, the joint work of H. G. Wells and St. John Ervine, has made its first appearance here at the little Lenox Hill Theatre in East Seventy-eighth Street. The difference between Mr. Wells's novel, written about ten years ago, and the play lies chiefly in the fact that the play touches on more recent events, the time being on the spring of 1919, and the wonderful visit of the angel to the vicar of Sidemorton occurs in a dream. Otherwise the book is followed pretty closely. The Players Company, the producers, have assembled an excellent cast, and the piece is staged in a praiseworthy manner by Eugene Lockhart and Henry Stillman. Margaret Mower's embodiment of the angel has been warmly praised, and Robert Le Sueur has been highly commended for his impersonation of the vicar.

"Rust."

At the Greenwich Village Theatre, this three-act drama of modern Spain, by Robert Presnell, is the current attraction. The scenes are laid in the Ancantes, described as "a striking morass of junk, a heterogeneous mass of dead and forgotten things cast away by the city of Barcelona." Jose is a song-writer who longs to break away from the atmosphere of rust. He becomes a bull-fighter for one afternoon, but is hissed from the arena when he discovers in the angry and frustrated bull a fellow-sufferer on the earthly junk-heap. Then he smashes a bottle over the head of Miguel, his rival for the hand of the beautiful Paula. "To kill a man," says Jose's old father, rejoicing, "is the only way to escape from the Ancantes." So Jose flees to Valencia, where he becomes the most popular singer, pianist, and song-writer in the whole city. In a few months Jose returns to Barcelona to find that Miguel is not only alive, but has married Paula, and his old father stabs Miguel before he can shoot Jose, thus removing the one obstacle to the song-writer's happiness. Clarke Silvernail and Selena Rovle head the cast of sixteen players.

"FRANCESCA DA RIMINI."

Miss Pax Robertson, on Sunday evening, presented the Italian poet's play, using Mr. Arthur Symonds' translation. It was announced, before the curtain rose, in a witty "introductory" by Miss C. A. Arfwedson, that although very long, the play would be given in its entirety. This version skilfully preserved the love tragedy of Paolo and Francesca, and also vividly depicted the martial spirit of those stirring times with the interecine struggles between the Da Polenta and Di Malatesta. The beauty and imagery of the love scenes were exquisitely shown by Miss Pax Robertson, while her radiance and martial bearing in the second act was a noteworthy piece of acting. As the dreamy lover Mr. Ivain March put in some fine work; the long speeches allotted Paolo were delivered with sincerity and feeling. The brotherly affection felt for Francesca by Ostasio was neatly depicted by Mr. James Kirkham. Mr. Bruce Moir was sufficiently malevolent as the one-eyed monster, Malatestino, the heavy part of Giovanni being played in melodramatic lines by Mr. Norman Macdonald. In a very long cast mention should be made of the capital Jester of Mr. Alex. Robbins, the spiritual beauty of Miss Katharine Stanley as Samaritana, and the character studies of Mr. Fordham Ellis (Ser Toldo) and Gilbert Hall, the much-travelled Merchant.

THE VARIETY WORLD.

English Acts for Germany—Horace Sheldon Wins Stoll Golf Cup—The Wolves' Howl.

English Acts for Germany.

A specially convened meeting of the Executive Committee of the Variety Artists' Federation was called for yesterday to consider the report of Mr. Albert Voyce and Mr. Monte Bayly with regard to their visit to Berlin last week to study the position of variety in that country. A special general meeting is likely to be convened within the next few weeks to consider the question as to whether or not there shall be a fair and equitable interchange of talent as between Great Britain and Central Europe. Mr. Voyce holds the opinion that there is an enormous market for British talent in Berlin and the other principal cities of Germany, and an immense increase in accommodation. There are probably close upon 1,000 variety artists engaged each week in Berlin alone, the demand for talent being enormous and the audiences appreciative.

Demand for Talent.

"I have seen contracts," said Mr. Voyce, "which have been entered into as between German managers and British attractions for salaries ranging from £75 a day to £18 a week, to be paid either in the English pound, American dollars, or Renten marks, as may be arranged between the parties. As far as Bavaria is concerned—and this pertains to the Deutsche Theatre at Munich—the International Artists' Lodge's ban on British turns is purely a paper one, as Bavaria declines absolutely to be dictated to by Berlin or any other German city.

The present German music hall programmes are very tame. One influential music hall manager in Berlin informed me that he was prepared to build eight more music halls, two in Berlin and six in the provinces, provided he could get the V.A.F. embargo lifted."

Mr. Sheldon Again Wins Stoll Cup.

Mr. Horace Sheldon has again won the Sir Oswald Stoll Golfing Cup. The final took place at Oxley last week, and after a long duel over 36 holes, Mr. Sheldon beat his opponent, Mr. Greaves Johnson (of the Gresham Singers), by 3 up and 1 to play. This is the second consecutive year in which Mr. Sheldon has captured this much-coveted trophy.

Monthly Bogey Result.

Mr. Horace Sheldon also won the monthly bogey competition at Sudbury last Friday with a score of 3 down. Among others who competed were Mr. Greaves Johnson and Mr. Arthur Hanlon.

V.G.S. Committee Meeting.

There will be a meeting of the Vaudeville Golfing Society's committee at the Knickerbocker Club to-day (Wednesday). Proceedings commence at 11.30 a.m.

The Wolves.

It has been decided by the London Lodge of the Wolves to adopt the practice in some of the provincial lodges by admitting ladies to the ordinary weekly lodge meetings. This was the decision of a full meeting of the Grand Council, and it marks the first important alteration that the newly appointed Council has made. The London Lodge now meets on Thursday at noon, at the Metro Hotel.

B.B.B. and Ladies' Night.

Applications for tickets for the B.B.B. and Ladies' Night on Sunday next are not so numerous as anticipated, and it is hoped that an extra spur will be made by members to make the gathering a success. The function will take place at the Knickerbocker Club.

The Annual Howl.

Members are asked not to forget the annual "howl" at the London Club, Baker-street, on March 11. From midnight to 4 a.m. the club is to be handed over to the Wolves, and, apart from the dancing on one of the best ballroom floors in London, there will be a unique cabaret. Tickets, including refreshments, are 7s. 6d. each, and it is hoped there will be a large attendance.

A Manager Honoured.

Among the newly appointed Justices of the Peace for the City of Glasgow appears the name of Edward William Crossley Taylor, the courteous and popular manager of the Alhambra Theatre.

Fred Kitchen.

Fred Kitchen commences a short tour on March 3 at the Pavilion, Glasgow, with his well-known sketch, "If the Cap Fits," in which Miss Gladys Horridge will play her original part. In June he opens in a new big production, Fred Kitchen, jr., is on tour with Miss Phyllis Dare in "The Street Singer," which is a big success, and will probably be seen in London shortly.

"Leap Year."

Rehearsals for "Leap Year," Julian Wylie's next London Hippodrome revue, began in Liverpool on Monday, and the show will be produced at the Olympia there on Thursday, March 6. After a ten-days' presentation in Liverpool, "Leap Year" will be brought to London, and will have its first showing at the Hippodrome on March 20.

Variety Artists' Federation.

Members of the V.A.F. are requested to note that four death levies are now due on the 1924 book. Red stamps 8.

C.A.A. Annual Meeting.

The annual general meeting of the Concert Artists' Association will be held on Friday next, at the King George's Hall (Y.M.C.A.), Tottenham Court-road. The meeting commences at 2 p.m.

Eric Randolph.

Arriving back from New York on Saturday, Eric Randolph tells us that he has had a most successful time, and appeared with the Greenwich Follies. Eric also took the opportunity of recording for the Gramophone Co., and was offered a long tour on the Keith circuit.

M.H.A.R.A.

Members of the M.H.A.R.A. are reminded that the arrangement re photographs (stamp size) being placed on the back of the green cards of membership comes into force on Saturday next, and that no reduced fare tickets next week-end will be issued unless the photographs have been so affixed.

The Bros. Shanks.

The Bros. Shanks have just concluded their third panto. season with Wylie Tate, with whom they have made an outstanding success. They resume their original vaudeville act on March 3 at the Metropolitan. This is the first time this act has been presented in London.

For South Africa.

Zena Zampa sailed from Southampton on Friday, per R.M.S. Balmoral Castle, to fulfil an engagement with the African Theatres, Ltd., booked by the I.V.T.A., Ltd.

Fred Duprez.

We are glad to hear that Fred Duprez has quite recovered from the shock and facial injuries received in the collision with his car at Stoke last Sunday week. He is this week at Stratford.

Vincent Ayden.

At Shepherd's Bush last week that fine tenor vocalist, Vincent Ayden, was heartily applauded for his singing of three delightful ballads.

Marjorie Fitzallen.

Playing principal girl in the recent pantomime at the Grand Theatre, Nottingham, and now supporting Harry Gunn in his comedy scenes, Marjorie Fitzallen has fixed panto. for the next two years under the management of Mr. Fred Warden to play a special part.

Cliff Martell.

Cliff Martell, "The Dancing Pianist," appeared recently at Proctor's and "43" Club, his dancing coming in for an ovation.

Florence Helm.

Miss Florence Helm, who recently concluded a successful panto. season at the Theatre Royal, Nottingham, is now playing a leading part in "All in Favour," which is at the Empire, Shepherd's Bush.

"Fast and Furious."

That popular show, "Fast and Furious," with Rex London, Fred Granger and Ross and Goodwin, is paying a return visit to the Hippo, Brighton, this week, and next week will be seen in town at the Alexandra, Stoke Newington.

Arthur Kingsley.

Recently concluding a long season with "Shuffle Along," Arthur Kingsley is to play a leading part in Elder Hearn's show, "Rumours," which is being produced at Worthing on Monday.

Karry Goodfellow.

Making his first appearance in town this week at the London, Shoreditch, Karry Goodfellow is presenting a novel entertainment with his own scenery and effects. In "Statues that Talk" he gives impressions of well-known stars.

Scott Sanders.

Although Scott Sanders writes most of his own material, he is always prepared to hear from authors who may have anything suitable to offer. Scott has now signed up for Australia, and sails next October, to appear on the Musgrove Tour, for which he has been booked through Reeves and Lampert.

Jock Mills.

At the London, Shoreditch, recently, Jock Mills was in very good form with his latest numbers, "London Town" and "Where is My Wandering Wife To-night?" keeping the audience in hearty laughter. He was recently seen by Sir Benjamin Fuller, who secured him for Australia as soon as he is cared to sail. Jock has decided to leave on March 27 for a thirty weeks' season, with an option of another thirty weeks.

Sammy Shields.

Sammy Shields was at Camberwell last week, and will be in town for twelve weeks. He has some good material, including "Three Johnnies," by Guy Reeve, and "Who'll Buy My Fine Footballers?" by George Logan. An "Ode to a Cricket Bat," also by George Logan, is a cleverly written item.

THE COLISEUM.

Royal laughter has stamped its hallmark on Pogo, that wonderful horse presented by the Brothers Griffiths. Merely to walk about in an animal's hide is not funny in itself, as many a pantomime beast has proved; completely to realise the joke of the semblance of a quadruped inspired by human mentality needs at least as much talent and training as many a "star" musician possesses. That the Griffiths have these qualifications is obvious in the varied attitudes and frames of mind of Pogo, who is creating the usual hearty merriment at the Coliseum this week. The bill also includes Harry Tate. "Broadcasting" is not only delightfully amusing, but is a liberal education for the benefit of an age obsessed with mechanical contrivances. In spite of its disarmingly inconsequential air, it is skilfully cumulative in its effect. The surprising way the properties collect upon the stage, the profound significance Harry Tate gives to each, whether hammer or umbrella, and the supernatural connection established between all the common or garden objects, creates a thrill of expectancy that finds ample satisfaction in the final bang.

Newly returned from his Canadian tour, Bransby Williams is even more genial than usual towards his "friends in front." Recovering from the severe handicap he sets himself by opening his performance on a note of pathos, he weaves the spell of his humour round the audience with what he describes as the "chestnut" of an unbelieving old man who calls upon a youth and his sister at tea.

In his popular rôle of the strike-doorkeeper he explains all the tricks that make success easily won on the stage. Then he asks for names of celebrities to be impersonated. Immediately clamour breaks out from stalls to topmost balcony. With unflinching success he mimics his contemporaries, and then revives memories with the voices and gestures of Dan Leno in "Superstitions," Herbert Campbell in "At My Time of Life," and Sir Henry Irving as Hamlet.

As Yvonne George, Muriel George, and Ernest Butcher and Margaret Halstan in "How He Lied To Her Husband," remain from last week, there is a very notable array of serious as well as humorous talent. In addition, there are the O'Gorman Brothers, with three excellent songs about the girl who received many kinds of presents from a flat to a black eye, about "rolling home in the morning after the ball," and about "our parlour on Sunday night," besides some expert dancing and brisk cross-talk. Errol Addison is an exceptionally capable dancer, with a charming partner in Mitrenga. The Sainnetos deftly create their pointless pictures.

THE ALHAMBRA.

What is in a name? The question once more arises when one considers the case of "Mr. Tower of London." Why the revue should have been given this title is not at all plain. Yet it has served its purpose so well as to become almost proverbial with continuous and ubiquitous success. The punning catch intrigues the mind and stays in the memory; it also provides scope for picturesque advertising such as the shadowgraph portcullis and beefeaters at the Alhambra last week. It brings audiences into the house, and once they are there, Gracie Field's eccentricity and Archie Pitt's sketches do the rest. So what does connection between title and show matter?

A second view of the performance, which is paying the Alhambra another visit this week, reveals aspects of Gracie Fields not thoroughly appreciated before. Her inimitable manner of ornamenting a song one could never overlook. Nor could anyone fail to note her ability to play a hundred and one tricks with her voice. Perhaps for these very reasons her potentialities as an actress may be overlooked. Yet her study of a Lancashire lass in "The Police Court Episode" is an admirable piece of acting. While Archie Pitt as the judge, Victor Thomas as the defendant, Stanley Durward as counsel, and Roy Parry as the policeman are showing their skill in knockabout humour, she is giving the "proceedings" an air of reality by means of her earnest demeanour. What is fun to the others is a matter of intense seriousness to her. When the judge is summing up, her interpolation, "Who's Winning?" has the force of several minutes of preparation behind it. She is not interested in the law for a moment. She means business. Her husband wants money for damages. He won't get it. She'll see to that. All the hard-headedness that has made the Northerner famous is in her gaze. There is no need for her to encourage the advances of the judge. With a mind so set upon it, she is bound to get her own way without blandishments.

But though "Mr. Tower of London" without Gracie Fields would resemble "Hamlet" without the Prince of Denmark, the show is very well arranged. There is plenty of variety in the scenes and direct connection with things the public understand, such as police courts, tops of buses, concert parties and matrimonial infelicities. The vigour of the singing and dancing is unlimited. The humour is robust and all the company—Betty Fields and Edith Fields should also be mentioned—act as if they would not find their parts in this "musical-comedy revue" grow monotonous after another run of five or six years—which may come to pass.

VICTORIA PALACE.

Mr. Billy Bennett is making a great success at the Victoria Palace this week. His comedy has increased in value, his gestures become still more perfect, and his expression more "precious" than ever these qualities seemed before. His almost indescribable repertoire includes "Years Have Rolled On," "The Principal Boy's Lament," "Dangerous Dan," "If Winter Comes," and "The Cheese It Stands Alone." Seldom has there been such an ovation for a comedian at a "first house" as was accorded Mr. Bennett on Monday. Coram, the handsome military ventriloquist, scores emphatically with his clever comedy, his fine delivery, with the skilful handling of his puppet and his magnificent Whitehall setting. Coram has always something fresh to say, and if he dries himself up he is never at a loss for an impromptu "gag." He, too, gets a most enthusiastic reception.

Tucker is another great favourite, with his playing, his dancing and his wonderful double voice, and he scores full points for no fewer than seven numbers, including "Dancing Dan," "Wonderful One," "I'm Just Wild About Carrie," "Sleepy Sheep," "I Love Her," and "They Call It Dancing." Our Palace Girls are doing better than ever and dancing delightfully to the tune of "Oh Gee Oh Gosh!" The Seven Nobodies, presented by Mr. Harry Leslie, do well with a series of numbers which include "I Want to Nestle," "I Did Not Know," and "Keep Up Your Pecker." Messrs. Holson and Bert are entertaining comedians and dancers, and Pic and Alf are excellent black-faced dancers, eccentrics, and acrobats. A big success was made by Belle and Maize Avalon in a "skatolario" scene entitled, with every justification, "The Poetry of Motion." They do ten very acceptable items in beautiful costumes on roller skates, including a song and dance, two-step, gipsy dance, waltz, jazz, Russian dance, a minuet, and a step-dance—all very remarkable. These two talented young ladies deserve especial credit not only for their work, but for the dressing of their act and the manner of its presentation.

CAMBERWELL PALACE.

Debonair and breezy Whit Cluniffe is at the Camberwell Palace this week, and has two characteristic numbers, "And Another Thing" and "Money and Misery," which were received with the utmost appreciation. "Little Old London Town" also remains a popular item. Follows Ernie Mayne. Laughter is unrestrained all the time he is on. A movement of the face and the house roars. He has a new song, "Oh, Grannie," and, attired as one, severely battered, he tells her history in song. In the musical monologue, "A Corner of My Heart," he ranges from the sublime to the ridiculous in very clever fashion, whilst his topical Parliamentary allusions in his election song were distinctly amusing.

Zetta Mor is a genuinely clever and versatile artist who seems to be able to impersonate anything and everybody, from a coster girl who drifted into a Sultan's harem to the faithful and beaten wife of a French apache. "As Long as He Loves Me," sung during the latter presentation, was very dramatic, and earned well-deserved applause. Her effort at male impersonation is none the less attractive, and as "Colonel Chutney of the Hot-stuff Hussars" she reveals a talent which thoroughly impressed the house.

We have a welcome freshness in the performance of Spencer Ward and Gertrude Long. Spencer Ward represents a member of the audience who has wandered on to the stage and seems terribly impressed by his surroundings. Invited by Miss Ward to show that he can sing—as he "Ah, ah, jolly well boasts"—the artist comes to life and displays the fact that he has a really fine voice. His rendering of "The Trumpeter" was one of the best we have heard, whilst "Be Brave and Smile" was also excellently sung. Harry Thurston in "Down, Not Out," proves what a capable actor he is in four scenes dealing with the ups and downs of a "star" of the old school. His portrayal in characters grave and gay was a splendid example of the dramatic artist's ability. Harry Champion is a great favourite, and others in the programme were Wallace and Partner and the Osborne Trio.

CHISWICK EMPIRE.

Wonderful birds are Mdle. Royal's pigeons. There are fifty of them, highly gifted and beautiful; they go through their allotted tasks with precision and prettiness. As droll as ever are the Ten Loonies, and they raised hearty merriment; a clever performance brimming over with good humour and burlesque. Then there is "A Whirl of Girls," in which terpsichore is the main feature. Maggie Dickenson and Syd Culver, fresh from their triumphs in the "Music Box," find ample scope for their undoubted ability. Al. Clark adds to the general liveliness, and the six whirly girls are fair to look upon and dainty artists as well.

Miss Lily Morris has a gift of her own, and the popular and clever comedienne scores hugely in her varied impersonations. Kirby and Hudson are deservedly favourites here, and their show sparkles with originality and sweet melody. Will Lacey also adds his contribution to the varied feast, and Ernie Roma proves a host in him self. Rich and Galvin are quite a delightful duo, and the world news is faithfully recorded on the Biograph.

WILLESDEN HIPPODROME.

After several weeks of revue, a welcome change back to variety was made at Willesden Hippodrome on Monday night. Hilda Glyder, the popular comedienne, sang three of her latest successes, which included "I Love Me" and "The Sheik of Birmingham." Another distinctive feature of the programme was the appearance of Ina Hill, who delighted the audience with some excellent selections from her repertoire. Bond Rowell, too, who has an exceedingly fine voice, completely held his audience with some character songs, including "Good-bye, Broadway," while Will Collinson and Co. appeared in a sketch entitled "Enery, the Brave." This was exceedingly well done, and was received with general approval. Harry Emeric is full of mirth, and his contributions, especially that of the sailor, were highly successful. Daisy James gained hearty applause for her "We All Went Down to Southend in a Charabanc" and "Fifty, Fifty Every Time," while Jack Lane, the Yorkshire rustic, vastly amused the house with his quaint songs at the piano and humorous patter. Three popular entertainers in the persons of Wright, Connelly and Mac were also responsible for a good share of applause, and the Three Kohes, Japanese specialty artists, performed some remarkable balancing feats. Joe and Willy, in the equilibristic and comedy act, conclude a remarkably fine entertainment.

"ALL IN FAVOUR"

At the Shepherd's Bush Empire, "All in Favour," the bright revue presented by Mr. Tom Arnold, is at the Shepherd's Bush Empire this week. Mr. Frederick Bentley figures with capital comedy effect in many of the episodes. One of the most amusing of these shows Mr. Bentley as a prospective bridegroom experiencing a little difficulty on his wedding morn. In this scene capital assistance is rendered by Miss Mabel Lambeth, an actress of keen comely sense. There are several other excellent artists in the production, notably Miss Florence Helm, whose personality lends great effect to various solo numbers; Miss Alma Vane, who sings very sweetly in an artistic scene descriptive of that fine Scottish ballad, "Callin' Herrin"; Mr. Gordon James, who also proves himself to be the possessor of a fine voice; and Mr. Bruce Cameron, whose tall figure makes him a very effective foil to Mr. Bentley in several of the comedy episodes. Special mention is also due to the Tiller Girls, whose dancing is responsible for many delightful moments, and the Mostyn Quartette of male singers, who awaken many a pleasant memory with their operatic pot-pourri—a fine piece of vocalisation, which was encores on the occasion of our visit.

Rex Halm, who will be remembered as the writer of among other successes, "Amazon," "Drifting," "Roaming," and "Angelus," has joined the staff of Messrs. Francis, Day and Hunter, and will look after the Blackpool interests of the firm.

Doris Harley.

Doris Harley, of Doris and Billy Harley, is making good progress towards recovery from her recent operation, and hopes to be well enough to resume in Jack Gallagher's new production, "Wake Up," at Birkenhead, on March 17. She will be in the nursing home at 184, Hagley-road, Birmingham, until March 6, and would be pleased to see any friends who happen to be in that neighbourhood.

"Ginger."

The new revue, "Ginger," in which appear Hedges Brothers and Jacobson and Dick Tubbs, appears for the first time in town at the Finsbury Park Empire next Monday.

Mr. Alfred Davies.

The many friends of Mr. Alfred Davies will be glad to learn that he is progressing as well as can be expected after his accident at Liverpool last week.

Magicians' Club.

To-night (Wednesday) magicians and friends are merry-making at the National Hotel, Upper Bedford-place, the occasion being the first smoking concert of the season. A much-esteemed vice-president, E. T. Marr, will be in the chair, assisted by Will Goldston and J. C. Pickstone.

Two future events are on Sunday, March 9: Dinner to Arthur Prince; and Wednesday, March 26: Lecture by Will Day at the National Hotel on "The Cinematograph, Past and Present."

"GINGER." At Coventry.

A new song, dance and laugh revue, "Ginger," was produced at the Coventry Hippodrome last week. The book is by Herbert C. Sargent, with incidental music by E. Hedges and F. Malcolm, and dances by Edward Dolly. Presented in 12 artistic scenes, each of which is in cameo form, the revue combines beauty with brightness. The opening is laid in the author's garden, the leading artists being introduced on original lines, and after a musical number, "O.O.O. Ernest," prettily rendered by Miss Mona Magnet, a slight argument between Mr. Dicky Tubbs and Mr. Forest Tell leads on to a domestic interlude, "Leave It to Father." Worked on comic lines by Dick Tubbs, Mona Magnet, Freddie Malcolm, Gladys Moehr, and Henry Hentsher, this has an amusing radio skit, showing how father's best-laid schemes went wrong. In the finale of the first part advantage is taken of the fact that the scene is laid in Hong Kong to present a Chinese willow-pattern plate setting of exquisite beauty and delicacy, making, with the richly-dressed ensemble, a striking stage picture.

A humorous view of the Italian quarter of London is given in "In Soho," and a cabaret episode gives opportunities for Jesse Jacobson, Freddie Malcolm, and Dick Tubbs to exercise their talents in combination. A diverting coster episode by Dick Tubbs and Mona Magnet provides a clever character sketch, which makes an irresistible appeal. This contrasts well with the next scene, a dramatic sketch of an emotional character, entitled "The Seventh Day," which has an unexpected climax. "Amateur Night" provides a competition burlesque which furnishes an abundance of fun. "Night-time in Virginia," in which the whole company are concerned in a wealth of musical numbers, brings down the curtain on a most entertaining and artistic revue. Dicky Tubbs and Mona Magnet are the central figures, and both do admirably, being well supported by an efficient company and a well-drilled chorus. Hedges Brothers and Jacobson present their highly acceptable musical speciality in the cabaret scene, and dancing medleys by the Eight Ginger Girls add to the attractiveness of the production, of which Mr. Theo. Ward is the musical director.

At present playing a season in South Africa, Miss Hilda Nelson and her talented players have been retained, and are fulfilling special engagements at Pietermaritzburg and elsewhere. Offers to continue the tour to Australia have been made, and if arrangements are completed she will return via America, where she may play a brief season.

The Committee of the Music Hall Ladies' Guild have to thank the officials of the "Wolves" for their kindness in donating to the Guild the handsome sum of £165 9s. 2d.

The matinee proceeds apace. Already Sir Thomas Lipton has taken his £10 10s. box, while donations have been received from Lord Leverhulme and Harry Preston, Esq., and the Duke of Newcastle and Lord Aberconway have signified their intention of being present. Other patrons include Lady Bertha Dawkins, Lady Wyndham, Sir Gerald du Maurier, Sir Gilbert Greenall, Sir Alfred and Lady Butt, Andre Charlott, Esq., and R. H. Gillespie, Esq.

Miss Florence Dwyer is thanked for collecting £1 from Messrs. Webb and Page's Fifty-Fifty Co.

Mrs. Billy Maher and Mr. Jack Maher wish to thank the following ladies and gentlemen for their sympathy and beautiful wreaths: Mr. and Mrs. Jack Maher, the Brethren of the Chelsea Lodge of Freemasons No. 3098, Mr. Alexander Conn, Miss Lizzie Conn, Miss Flora Conn, Miss Jimmie Conn, Miss Edna Conn, Mr. Billy Maher, jun., Wee Baby Duncan, Mr. Bob Wade (Geo. PIANO AND ORGAN.

Charles Ancliffe at the Opera House.

All doubt as to the success of a piano and organ in combination was set at rest by last week's experiment at the London Opera House. Put into the bill tentatively for three days only, it was promptly continued. The executants were Jack Courtney, the popular concert organist, and Charles Ancliffe, the well-known waltz composer, who gave a selection of his latest compositions. These included a striking intermezzo, "Canterbury Chimes," incorporating the melody of "Summer is Icy Men In." How this latter number, which proved a rage on both sides of the Atlantic some years ago, came accidentally into being is interesting. The composer arrived at Charing Cross late one night from a ten-year exile in India, and, strolling round the West End, overjoyed at being among the night gaiety of London once again, commenced an exuberant humming. The humming gradually took shape as a melody, which, committed to paper, became—possibly because of its very spontaneity—one of the biggest selling waltzes ever written.

While in India, by the way, Charles Ancliffe conducted at the Delhi Durbar, having no fewer than 2,000 massed bandsmen under his baton. Ancliffe was always a precocious musician. He was a paid organist at 11 years of age, had won the gold baton for composition at Kneller Hall at 19, and only a year later became bandmaster of the South Wales Borderers. Many are the successful waltzes which he has written. "Twilight Time" promises to enjoy a greater vogue than any of recent years. "How to Write a Waltz" saw the light from his pen during the past few weeks.

SPECULATIVE POSTERS.

At Wandsworth County Court, before Judge Bairstow, Messrs. A. Cooke, Ltd., printers, of Leeds, sued Miss Doris Ashton, music hall artist, for £84 18s., balance of account for printing. The plaintiff's case was that the defendant ordered one thousand pictorial posters for exhibition in the various music halls at which she performed. It was arranged that the defendant should supply the plaintiffs with a list of her engagements, and plaintiffs would then endeavour to sell the posters at the halls where she was engaged. They succeeded in disposing of 151, but still had 849 left, which they were unable to dispose of, owing to the defendant not having supplied them with a sufficient number of halls. They were prepared to continue the sale and credit the defendant with the amount obtained.

Miss Ashton said the plaintiffs called upon her and said that all they wanted was permission to reproduce her photograph. She was asked for no money, and did not understand that after two years she would have to pay for any of the posters which had not been disposed of. The Judge: I cannot understand why you should suppose they were going to reproduce your photograph at their own expense. Defendant: Because they print all these photographs and sell them for their own benefit. I should never think of going to such an expense. The Judge: There is no knowing what theatrical persons will go to in the way of expense. (Laughter.) Judgment was given for the plaintiffs for the amount claimed.

Concluding another successful season in pantomime at the Palladium, Phil Rallis and his partner will resume their popular act on the halls. Phil has been specially engaged for another production, which commences a long provincial tour in May.

At Hackney last week Rich and Galvin commenced a six weeks' season in town, which includes visits to the Alhambra and the Victoria Palace.

Concluding with "The Football Match" at Shepherd's Bush, Jean Allistone will appear in "The Love Match," under the same management, opening next week at Southsea.

At Brighton recently Freddie Forbes took delivery from Ray Mann, of Mann and Handover, of his new Wolseley car, with which he intends to do all his journeys.

Swindon (G.W.R.) Mechanics' Institution Amateur Theatrical Society need their stage enlarged, and their "coming-of-age" performance of "Les Cloches de Corneville" should secure their desire. Such a Gaspar as that of Mr. H. Monray Phillips is rare amongst amateurs; Mr. Fred Yates' Baillie was also a distinctly capable study, never exaggerated. No less so the Gobo of Mr. A. J. Ward. Very dainty and unaffected, the Germaine of Miss May Gardner, whose songs and duets with the Marquis de Corneville (Mr. Arthur Marchmont) were really delightful. Mrs. Agnes Platt proved a charming and vivacious Serpolette. At the final performance presentations were made to Mr. S. H. Platt (hon. and very courteous sec.), Mr. R. H. Wood (producer and stage manager), Mrs. R. H. Wood, and to the musical director, Mr. Edgar P. Monk.

MINNIE COLLINS.

Minnie Collins, who will sail for Australia in a few weeks' time, is busy trying out a batch of Feldman numbers for production "down under." Miss Collins is an ardent Feldmanist.

FOOTLIGHT FLASHES.

NEW NUMBERS.

Amongst others who have recently found "just the song required" at Feldman Building are Lily Morris, Nora Delany and Daisy Dormer. All three are now working their new material with enthusiasm, and even more than their usual success, which, as everyone knows, is something to write home about.

"WEMBLING."

Everyone will soon be singing the new Exhibition number, "Wembling at Wembley With You," which Dudley Beresford and Harry Collman have written in such happy and appropriate style.

MAGNETIC.

There is a magnetic quality about the new song, "When Will the Sun Shine For Me?" which numerous artists are featuring with wonderful success. Another attractive number is "Won't You While Away a Little While with Me?" which carries duet possibilities that, even thus early, are being exploited to splendid effect.

"FORBIDDEN FRUIT."

The one thing that is forbidden in the above-named production is antiquated material. Everything in the show must be bang up to date. Feldmanism keeps the matter right in a musical sense, as the selection, for early inclusion, of "Passionetta," "Broadway Strut," "Gone," "When Will the Sun Shine For Me?" "Invitation," and "I'll Build a Castle In Spain" amply prove. All these numbers are new, and—of course—good.

GOOD ADDITION.

Hart and O'Brien have added "Bebe" to their act, with most satisfactory results.

THE GOODS.

Syd Walker's "Lights Up" revue provides the real goods. Herewith a sample:—"Oh! Gee! Oh! Gosh!" (featured by Freda Francis), "That Red Head Gal" (Victor Leopold), "Say It While Dancing" (Ensemble), and "Queen of the Nile" (Royal Welsh Choir). Mr. Walker will turn the lights up on several other new Feldman specials shortly.

"RAINBOW."

The Palladium offers the "Rainbow" revue, produced by Albert De Courville, and the production is proving a big attraction. One outstanding feature is that of "The Rainbow Girls," in a delightful medley, which includes "Joe Is Here," "I'm Wild About Wild Men," and "I'm Hungry for Beautiful Girls."

MAY EDNEY.

May Edney, in C. Harcourt's "Records" revue, is featuring "Dancing Fool" and "I'm Wild About Wild Men," and gaining splendid notices all round for her excellent work in these songs.

FOOTLIGHT FLASHES.

"EPISODE 6."

In "Episodes," a non-stop revue written, arranged and produced by Jackson Owen, "Episode 6" is described as "Concertina," and Reg. Colmer sees it through in brilliant style. "Who's Sorry Now?" "My Sweetie Went Away," and other popular Feldman numbers, figuring conspicuously in Mr. Colmer's speciality.

SINGING AND SKATING.

Belle and Maisie are at the Victoria Palace this week, singing and skating themselves into a front place in London's affections. This is their first appearance in London, and they are giving a worthy performance. Their musical numbers fit splendidly and go without a hitch. The list includes "Honeymoon Time," "Joe Is Here," "Aggravatin' Papa," "Chiffon," "The Cossacks," and "Canadian Capers."

THEY WANT MORE-FELDMANISM.

Syd H. Parsons ("Oh, Betsy!" revue) says: "We are still anxious to add more Feldmanism to the show. We have a fine list in 'Say It While Dancing,' 'Leave Me With a Smile,' 'Gone,' and 'All the Girls are Fond of a Sailor,' but we can find places for more such winners."—Mr. Parsons can always tap a fruitful source of winners in Feldmanism.

FIRST TIME!

Norah Blaney and Gwen Carter have picked a winner in "I Love Loves Me," a Stanley and Allen number, with unlimited comedy possibilities. The popular artists mentioned have tried the number out, and found it enormously successful first time. Of course, they put the song over with that refined artistry for which they are justly famous.

SPLENDID PRODUCTION.

One of the best productions of "Minnetonka" is found in Alf Dodd's "Dixie Minstrels" show, which features another stupendous winner in "Uncle Sambo."

POPULAR FEATURE.

A popular feature of N.S.L. Concerts is the singing of popular songs by The Grenadiers Vocal Four. Two of their most attractive offerings are "Who's Sorry Now?" and "Roll Along, Missouri."

BRILLIANT "BRILLIANTS"

"Brilliant" revue certainly justifies its scintillating title. Feldmanism adds to the sparkle with "If You Don't Think So, You're Crazy" (featured by Clifton Dane), "Leave Me With a Smile" (Clifton Dane and Miriam Milano), "Just Like a Rainbow" (Victoria Maitland and Rainbow Girls), "Idaho" (Clifton Dane), "Remember the Rose" (Victoria Maitland), "Dancing Fool" (Clifton Dane and Miriam Milano).
